ROLLING STONES
MOBILE STUDIO

The image shows a museum exhibit of the Rolling Stones Mobile Studio. A large blue train car is the central focus, with the words 'ROLLING STONES MOBILE STUDIO' written in large, stylized letters on its side. The letters are in shades of red and white. Several people are seen from behind, looking into the exhibit. The scene is lit with warm, yellowish light.

Rolling Stones Mobile Recording
Studio, 1968, UK

Dubbed the “Sistine Chapel of rock ‘n’ roll”, this historic mobile recording studio was used by rock legends Led Zeppelin, Deep Purple, and the Rolling Stones. The brainchild of the Stones’ tour manager, Ian Stewart, the RSM was built to accommodate the band’s 24-hour lifestyle. Equipped with a Helios recording console, the RSM soon gained popularity among other musicians, leading to the creation of countless classic rock albums.
